

Hussein, perhaps we would be at peace today in trying to find diplomatic solutions; but now, it seems these very countries who are against U.S. action, who have made a 4-month national pastime of bashing the U.S., now they want to get U.S. tax dollars and help rebuild Iraq.

The Nethercutt amendment speaks to this, and I hope that the conference committee will keep that in the legislation.

OFFICE OF PEACE

(Mr. KUCINICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KUCINICH. Madam Speaker, in a moment I will introduce legislation with 46 cosponsors to create a Department-level office of peace and the Department of Peace is introduced at this moment when it seems that war is inevitable, when our troops are in the streets of Baghdad, when members of the administration talk about the possibility of invasion of Iran and the possibility of invasion of Syria.

This is the moment when we need to ask whether war is inevitable or not. This is the moment when a Department of Peace can take steps to making nonviolence an organizing principle in our society and when we can create a structure in our government where we can strive to make war itself archaic.

Forty-seven Members of Congress have put their names on this legislation because we are at a moment in the history of our Nation and in the world where we need to be asking questions. Is war inevitable? Forty-seven Members of Congress say no. Is peace inevitable? The answer must be yes.

HOUSING ACTION RESOURCE TRUST

(Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Madam Speaker, one of the main barriers of homeownership today is the down payment requirement from individuals that do not have the money. Do down payment assistance programs work? They do.

One example is in Rancho Cucamonga, California. The Housing Action Resource Trust, called HART, was formed in 1995; and in 1998, they started giving homeowners down payment assistance, and it is all private funds. Not a dollar of it is government funds.

What they have done is help 40,000 families actually achieve homeownership, and it is significant. Like I said, not a dime of it is government funds.

The HART gift funds can be used for down payment, closing costs, prepaid payments that can be used to remit buy-downs; and the main obstacle we have for moving people from apartments and rental units to housing is basically they do not have the money.

There are programs that do work. The government needs to look at participating in this.

EXTENDED UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Madam Speaker, 18 months ago, the Republican leadership during the debate on the first $15 billion bailout for the airline industry promised that soon, promptly, we would consider employee relief, including financial assistance, health insurance and training for new careers. It is 18 months later, and those 150,000 airline employees are still waiting, 18 months of waiting.

The airlines project they will lay off another 70,000 because of the war with Iraq. Boeing has cut 30,000 workers. They are all still waiting for that financial assistance and extended unemployment package.

Finally, today, here on the United States House of Representatives floor for the first time, 18 months too late, we are going to take a vote on that issue; and we will see where people really stand, whether they are with the workers or they just want to bail out the corporations.

REGULATORY TURMOIL

(Mr. BACHUS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BACHUS. We should be particularly concerned about the negative effects which needless regulatory uncertainty and policy turmoil are having on this country's telecommunications industry.

□ 1215

The United States' economy is very dependent on an efficient and effective telecommunication industry and the links they provide. Maintaining these important systems and building new advanced networks we are going to need requires a climate of regulatory stability. No one is going to invest heavily if they do not know what the fundamental rules of the game are.

The 1996 Telecommunications Act envisions the FCC coming up with a workable, judicially sustainable, competitive framework in short order. Seven years have passed since the act was signed into law, and according to most authorities, the FCC's latest decision is almost certain to be reversed and remanded once more.

In closing, Congress has a responsibility to the shareholders of these companies, to the hundreds of thousands of employees, and, most of all, to millions of consumers to end this turmoil. It is not good for anyone.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LETTER CARRIERS FOOD DRIVE

(Mr. INSLEE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. INSLEE. Madam Speaker, I rise today to mention a very important charitable project by our National Association of Letter Carriers, who have been engaged in this for several years. On the second Saturday in May, which will be May 10 this year, letter carriers in over 10,000 cities and towns will be delivering much more than mail on their routes. They will be collecting food donations left for them by their caring patrons on the 11th annual letter carriers national food drive.

I want to take this opportunity to commend the letter carriers for this incredible charitable endeavor. This effort by the letter carriers is the largest 1-day food drive in the Nation, and it has resulted in the last 10 years in over half a billion pounds of food donations to our local communities. I hope everyone listening will participate on May 10 by leaving a box of nonperishable food next to their mailbox before their mail arrives. It will help the estimated 30 million people who go hungry every day in America, including 12 million children.

Congratulations to our letter carriers for a job well done.
